

CMR

Is it time to call in the experts?

Recovering property damage claims is a headache. Internal teams work hard, but often lack the time, tools and resources necessary to recover the toughest claims. These challenges bog down internal processes, leaving organizations seeking out-of-the-box solutions.

While not all encompassing, the checklist to the right helps identify significant pain points within damage claim departments and processes.

- ❑ Loss of use is not calculated correctly or even included in claims.
- ❑ Employee time is wasted processing and following up on damage claims.
- ❑ Companies at fault aren't paying invoices for damage.
- ❑ Cycle time for damage claim recovery exceeds 90 days on average.
- ❑ Most damage claims are sent to litigation for resolution.
- ❑ Internal teams have trouble developing winning arguments proving negligence.
- ❑ Managing damage claims is not a core competency of the organization.
- ❑ Money is left on the table.

SCORE: ____ / 8

The more boxes checked, the more CMR's services can help.

Contact us today!

The Benefits of Experts

Contracting with an expert is the answer to recovering damage claims and alleviating staffing issues.

CMR has over 35 years of experience recovering money for damaged property for utility companies and governmental entities. Operating 100% contingency-based, we are a low-risk, high-reward solution to property damage claims problems. By outsourcing to CMR, existing employees can focus on higher-level tasks and the organization's core competencies.

Not all experts are the same, though. CMR is the clear, preferred partner.

We only get paid when you do, so we're highly motivated to invoice — and recover — winning claims quickly. Our average cycle time is 76 days.

We recover on more than 80% of claims, smashing the industry average.

We have the experience needed to get the job done right. We invoice over 81,000 claims a year for well over $230 million!

CMR has the resources, knowledge and experience needed to recover claims and improve your bottom line. Since we only get paid when you do, our services are a low-risk, high-reward solution to managing property damage claims.

Leaning on our experts is the right call.